

Honorlock™ Customer Success Story

Ken Craver, Director of Distance Education, Tyler Junior College, Tyler, TX

From Testing Centers to Fully Online Proctoring

Tyler Junior College (TJC), with a long history of offering online courses, historically used a combination of an on-campus testing center for proctoring local online students along with a remote online proctoring solution for those students who lived too far from campus to test in the testing center. However, when the college's testing center made the decision to no longer proctor academic assessments, Ken Craver, Director of Distance Education at Tyler Junior College knew the college needed a more scalable remote online proctoring solution. Fortunately, he already had just such a system in mind. The previous spring he attended the Texas Distance Learning Association Annual Conference (TxDLA) where he saw an Honorlock presentation that he described as, "mind-blowing."

"We knew when our testing center was no longer available that Honorlock would be the answer to our proctoring needs. In addition to its unmatched technology and ease of use, the option to pay by the student and not by the exam gave us the ability to proctor a large number of students at an affordable cost."

Student Flexibility

Craver said he found that one of the main advantages of using Honorlock is the flexibility it provides for their students. "They don't have to make a reservation like they used to do. They just log in and take the test anytime within the time window provided by the faculty member. "It just works!" said Craver.

“Honorlock has some technologies that no one else has: Search and Destroy and Multi-Device Detection!”

Ease of Use for Faculty

He also stated that faculty members that have used Honorlock have not had any problems or significant hurdles in implementing the platform into their courses. Previously, faculty had to wait to receive an email from the previous proctoring solution noting any red flags. “Now they just go in and click on results. The recent user interface updates streamlined the process even more for faculty,” said Craver.

“Honorlock has some technologies that no one else has: Search and Destroy and Multi-Device Detection!” said Craver. “Honorlock is going to try to keep a problem from happening rather than tell you about a problem after it happens.”

“They don’t have to make a reservation like they used to do. Students just log in and take the test anytime within the time window provided by the faculty member. It just works!”
